

Farmers all over the United States, including Utah, grow fruits and vegetables of all shapes, sizes and textures. They also come in colors from dark red and green to bright yellow and orange. These different colors are from natural ingredients found inside and also make them good for you! Try and visit a farmer's market to see how many different colors you can see and how many colors you can eat every day!